

Aurora Awards Honors The Palace at Coral Gables

MIAMI—The Palace at Coral Gables, the newest luxury, rental retirement community of The Palace Group, has received a 2011 Aurora Award in the Overall Commercial Construction's Retirement Community division.

The award was presented during the award ceremony at the 33rd annual Southeast Building Conference (SEBC) in Orlando. A national award competition, the Aurora Awards recognizes and honors the work of builders, planners, architects, developers, designers, interior merchandisers and other housing-related professions in a 12-state region stretching from Texas to Virginia plus the eastern Caribbean.

The prestigious award acknowledged the team members who are instrumental in the community's planning and development including Fullerton Group Architects, Mariano Corral Landscape Architects and the Howard Design Group, project interior designers.

A team of judges acknowledged the community's unique architectural design and interiors as an urban community which draws on old world influences.

The Palace at Coral Gables, opening in early 2013, will be the first luxury rental community of its kind in the 'City Beautiful' and will offer senior living residences in the heart of the city's famed 'Miracle Mile' shopping area. The community will have 243 residences with a variety of retail stores on the ground level of the nine-story building.

The community's Welcome Center is located at 16 Miracle Mile in Coral Gables and offers prospective residents an opportunity to preview residences and community plans.
